

CASE STUDY: Broadwind Energy, Inc.

If you're a wind energy producer, Broadwind Energy wants to be the wind beneath your wings. The company serves the wind power generation industry with wind turbine towers and gear systems along with engineering, repair, and logistics services. Its gear systems are also used by other energy and mining companies. Broadwind's logistics segment specializes in transporting the oversize and overweight components used in constructing wind power generation facilities. The company's locations are spread across North America in areas where wind energy production is heavy.

We recently pulled together details of Broadwind Energy, Inc., and its use of policyIQ from Chris Pinne, Director of Internal Audit.

A Return Client!

When Chris took the role at BWEN, she quickly recognized their need for version control.

"Before I started at BWEN they were using word and excel documents saved on SharePoint. There were constant issues because people would work on their hard drives and not save to SharePoint. We never knew if we had the latest version."

Chris had used policyIQ with a past employer and knew that policyIQ was the answer to their version control need!

"We now have one set of controls, ease of reporting, and never worry about version control."

Why policyIQ?

When asked why policyIQ over other tools the answer was easy.

"Familiarity, simplicity, ease of implementation and use, and cost!"

Superior Customer Support makes policyIQ shine!

"I can't say enough about the customer support! It is easy to talk to a person, they know who you are, and if they can't help, they figure it out and get back to you ASAP. It feels personal, which is a benefit." "I probably call the service number a few times a year. The service people are helpful and very knowledgeable."

Implementation – Easy Peasy

Although Chris was already familiar with policyIQ, starting fresh at a new company could be a concern. She was not worried. Why you ask?

“Implementation is easy, because the tool is simple, and it took just a few weeks before we were fully up and running.”

policyIQ for the win.....YES!

“It has certainly saved me time now that there are not version control issues, we now have one set of controls, ease of reporting, and never worry about version control. It is also great to have simplicity but flexibility at the same time and ease of communicating our content with internal and external people (auditors).”

There are few things that we love more than building long-term relationships with our policyIQ community of users, and we look forward to working with Chris Pinne and the entire Broadwind Energy, Inc. team for many years to come.
